Guide to inscriptions

Tailoring your stone can be achieved in many ways: not only is the wording unique, but we can apply different inscription rules to get something that works for you.

- We use Century Schoolbook and Arial as standard and can access a library offering 100 alternatives
- Capital letters throughout is standard and we can apply sentence case as well as italics
- Dates and descriptions tend to be smaller in size
- Choosing the right colour for your inscription will often depend on the stone and we recommend
 - gold for both dark or light stones
 - silver for darker stones
 - pewter for darker stones
 - black for lighter stones
 - white for darker stones

Further personalisation

Designs can be added to stones to personalise them. From photography to popular patterns set into corners, as headers, or as a full margin, you can create a very individual memorial. We've set out some of the more popular choices here and would be very happy to explore any proposals you may have.

Grave markers

Wedge markers can stand alone without the need for a foundation or can be placed in front of an existing memorial to provide space for added inscriptions. Available in different sizes and colours, a free standing marker is a flexible and lower cost option.

Vases and Flowers

Including a permanent place to put flowers is not only practical but a valuable extra to match a memorial stone. We can add a small inscription to our stone vases, which can be applied to the base, or if possible, to the top of a stone. Stone vases come in two sizes and a variety of colours.

Restoring Heritage Memorials.

Our team of professional stonemasons can clean and repair old stones, particularly leaning memorials or those that have been laid down in local authority cemeteries.

Reapplying inscriptions which have faded over time is also possible, sometimes in-situ and others back in our workshop. Heritage matters to us: some of our team are third generation stonemasons while others are starting new careers in this sector.

We are members of the National Association of Memorial Masons and are committed to ensuring we consistently offer the highest standards of craftsmanship and care for families today, and generations to come.

Marking the past for future generations.

A memorial is a lasting tribute to the enduring memory of a loved one.

It is a tangible way of commemorating their life, being both a reflection of their unique personality and an inspiration for future generations.

Our team of highly skilled stonemasons provide expert guidance and advice at all stages of the process.

From our workshop in the Scottish Borders, we offer sample materials and digital drawings of your preferred design. It may take various drafts to get something that's just right and we'll work to your timeframes.

No memorial work is undertaken until we have provided you with a full written estimate and you are happy to go ahead with the project. From then, we'll keep you up-to-date as the project develops to the final installation.

Our team of highly skilled stonemasons provide expert guidance and advice at all stages of the process.
